

Is your WireLess LAN Secure?

Today, WiFi (802.11) hotspots are everywhere. Do you know if your hotspot is secure? It's probably a lot less secure than you think. Studies show that up to 58% of all Wireless Access Points (WAP) have NO security enabled! Most types of equipment are shipped by default with no security enabled. However, even if you enable the WEP security or MAC address screening that came with your system, you are completely susceptible to hackers. See attached articles at www.wifi4less.com. You need to use the newer WPA and 802.1X standards to keep the hackers out.

We provide true HomeLAN Security™

Most modern wireless equipment supports the standard 802.1X protocol (see your manual or consult the list at www.wifi4less.com). You simply sign up for WiFi4Less HomeLAN Security™ services on the web. We accept Visa or MasterCard using a secure transaction through Bank of America. Your users are authorized with a simple username and password. It's that simple! It even works behind a NAT or firewall. The WAP communicates to our hosted AAA RADIUS servers and then only authorized users get access. If an unauthorized connection is attempted, we log it and can send an email to you.

How can I use this?

Simply sign up for the service on the web and assign user ID's to all of the wireless devices in your home or office. The client software is already included in Windows 2000 and Windows XP. Your users don't need to download anything!

Business users love it too.

Our secure wireless hotspots enable an enterprise to become wireless enabled with total security. We provide super-strong radius encryption and full authorization, accounting and authentication (AAA) in the enterprise. The business users can enjoy wireless data access and low-cost voice (VoIP) service.

'Locks up' your network.
